THURSDAY, APRIL 26, 1934.

Mr. Townsend, the new Superintendent of the Philadelphia Mint, is the man for that or any other place, a "dancer," a Democrat who don't need to stand on the house-tops and proclaim his Democracy, for his acts speak more loudly than words. He has been in office only a few weeks, but there are seventy-two more Democrats waiting money for the United States than there were when he took charge of the mint.

The Herald's Washington correspondent says that two prominent members of the Democratic Business Men's Club of New York, who were in Washington for the purpose of discussing the tariff bill with members of the Senate Finance Committee, called at the White House and had a talk with the President, in the course of which he assured them that he did not look with favor upon the income tax section and would like to see it killed.

After two weeks of very hard work and the examination of 134 witnesses, exclusive of those who offered valid excuses, a jury has been found for the trial of Dr. Meyer, accused of poisoning Ludwig Brandt, or Gustav Baum, for the purpose of obtaining the insurance on his life. In spite of the law, which seems to have for its object the selection of jurors who are too ignorant or too lazy to read, or too stupid to form opinions concerning what they have read, this Meyer jury is composed of fairly intelligent men and is not by any means a bad lot, but the great difficulty in obtaining the jury is striking evidence of the necessity for a change in the law regarding the qualifications and selection of jurors.

The strike of the soft coal miners is by all odds the greatest strike ever known in this country. It affects the coal industry from Pennsylvania to the Rocky Mountains and it is estimated that at least 140,000 men are out. The demand of the men is for an increase of wages from an average of thirty-five cents a ton to forty cents a ton, and rather than grant the increase asked for, the owners and operators of mines have permitted this general suspension of work. This general strike, following so quickly after the great hue and cry raised by mine owners for the retention of the duty of seventy-five cents a ton on bituminous coal, emphasizes the futility of the claim that tariff taxes, levied ostensibly for the protection of American labor, really benefit American labor. With a tariff tax of seventy-five cents a ton and miners' wages less than half that sum the conclusion is inevitable that the tariff has no effect on wages, or that the mine owners pocket more than half the tax levied on consumers.

Gov. Flower's veto of the bill amending the military code so as to permit camps of Sons of Veterans to parade with firearms, rests on the very valid ground that all organizations enjoying this privilege, except G. A. R. Posts, are liable to be called out to aid the National Guard in quelling riots and repelling invasion, while the bill disapproved of distinctly exempted Sons of Veterans from liability to be called to the assistance of the National Guard. The Governor says that the liability to military duty justifies the privilege extended to independent organizations of a semi-military character, and that it is an error to make in favor of the Sons of Veterans, all other organizations of a similar character. He says that the bill would make the Sons of Veterans a matter of fact, and a long-term precedent would be established which might be used to call out the Sons of Veterans in time of riot or insurrection.

UNJUST DISCRIMINATION CHARGED.

Milk Producers Cite the D. and H. Before the Railroad Commissioners

The State Railroad Commissioners

gave a hearing in Binghamton, Tuesday, on the complaint of Nicholson & Church, milk producers at Alton, Chongango county, against the D. and H. railroad. They alleged that the railroad had entered into a combination with a company known as the "Produce Dispatch," whose chief promoter is R. E. Westcott, for the control of milk shipments from along the line, and granted it privileges which are denied to private shippers.

The evidence showed that the "Produce Dispatch" established milk stations at various points along the line of the road and placed agents in charge who bought milk from farmers in the vicinity. Nicholson & Church sold milk to the agent at Alton for a time, but dissatisfied with the price offered by him, decided to send their milk direct to the city and thus obtain a better profit. Their milk was delivered to the railroad company and for several days was sent in lead cars at the same rate as milk was accepted from the "Produce Dispatch," that is, at 32 cents for each 40 quart can. After some days the railroad raised the rate to 40 cents per can and afterwards refused to send the milk except in the baggage car, where it would spoil before reaching the destination.

Nicholson & Church employed counsel who visited the railroad officials at Albany, and not receiving satisfaction, filed a complaint with the Railroad Commissioners. Two days after the complaint had been filed, Nicholson & Church were notified that their milk would be received and carried on the same terms and in the same way as "Produce Dispatch" milk, and it was explained that the milk had been refused through a misapprehension. Nicholson & Church decided, however, to go on with the proceedings before the Railroad Commissioners, that they might be assured that there would be no misapprehensions in the future.

The order of the commissioners in the case will be made in a few days.
